Recover Royalties - 8 November 2026 - from the statements and agreements uploaded. Our reading of those documents: check it against the originals before relying on it. Not legal, financial or tax advice.

1. What to look into

Example Music Publishing paid $2,297 less than your agreement says

About $2,300 a year

At your agreement's rates, Example Music Publishing should have paid $117,878 in the last 12 months; it paid $115,581. All of it is streaming income from the United States ($2,297). Worked example - NEON ORCHARD, streaming (mechanical) income, United States: collected $9,229 x the agreement's 80% x your 100% share = $7,383 should have been paid; $6,922 was paid.

Should have paid	$117,878
Paid	$115,581
Difference	$2,297
Where	Streaming · United States

What to do

1. Send them the note (Copy as an email), with the one-page PDF.
2. Give them 30 days to answer, and ask for a corrected statement with the difference paid.
3. No answer, or not corrected? Your agreement's audit clause lets you, your lawyer or your accountant check their books - the evidence pack has the agreement wording and the lines behind it.

2. What the agreements say

CO-PUBLISHING AND ADMINISTRATION AGREEMENT

With Example Music Publishing

- Mechanical income (page 1): 80% of Publisher's receipts
- Public performance income (the publisher's share) (page 1): 75% of Publisher's receipts
- Synchronisation income (page 1): 75% of Publisher's receipts
- Print income (page 1): 80% of Publisher's receipts
- All other income (page 1): 80% of Publisher's receipts

3. The statement lines behind it

The lines behind the finding, as the statements printed them, newest period first and largest first within it - the 150 largest of 17,521 lines; the amount found covers all of them, all from Example Music Publishing. Collected = what the payor reports it received; paid = the line's royalty to you. Should be = collected x the agreement's rate for that kind of royalty x your share of the song (read from its own lines). Short = should be minus paid (a minus: paid more).

4. How it was worked out

Every statement is read line by line from the file as it came from the payor; its lines are added up and compared with the total the statement prints (within $1, or 0.5% on a large statement). A statement that prints no total is read in full and added up.

The agreement check: for each line, what the payor collected x the agreement's rate for that kind of income x your share of the song = what should have been paid, compared with what was paid. A difference within $25 or 1% counts as paid as the agreement says.

One rate per kind of income per country: an agreement sets one rate for one kind of income in one country. Within each song (whose share does not change), every line from the same payor of the same kind of income in the same country is compared with the rate that carries most of the song's money; lines paid at a lower rate - on one service, from a statement on, or on some songs - are shown with what they would have paid at that rate.

A service that stopped paying: a service (Spotify, YouTube, Apple ...) that paid a song or the catalog in at least three statements and nothing in the payor's last two, while that payor's statements carry on.

Missing statements: each payor's own cycle (monthly, quarterly, half-yearly) is worked out from its statements; a period with nothing, or statements that stop while the others carry on, is shown with the payor's usual amount per statement.
